Considerable growth in transport infrastructure in the Med countries

MEDSTAT II has just released the publication: Considerable growth in transport infrastructure in the Mediterranean partner countries.

In order to satisfy the increasing demand for transport services, most of the MED partner countries have developed a wide range of infrastructure facilities, i.e. ports, airports and roads. The national transportation networks of all Mediterranean partner countries were expanded between 1997 and 2004.

It is published in the Eurostat collection "Statistics in focus" (SiF) and available on:
